NOTE ON THE ANCHE AGREEMENT.

Mysore had its own well organised and extensive postal system throughout the State long before it entered into an arrangement with the Postal Department of the Government of India. The "Anche" or local post of Mysore was an ancient Institution. The extension of the system through-out the whole State was one of the earliest measures of the reign of Chkkadevaraja Wadiyar (about A.D.1672). Further mainly with a view to having a uniform system throughout Indian Provinces and also in view of the fact aht numerous public advantages were likely to result from such an amalgamation of the local with the British Post, the Mysore Government entered into an agreement with the Government of India towards the end of the year 1887, completely transferring the local postal system to the Government of India. It was agreed at the time of the "Anche" agreement (1) that Mysore will be treated in all postal matters exactly as if it were the most favoured British Province, 2) that the whole official correspondence of the State would be carried free within the limits of the State and 3) that the British Government accept full liability for the whole postal expenditure of Mysore.) At the time of the transfer of the "Anche" system to the Government of India, the total number of post offices in the State was 432, of which 170 were regular post offices in charge of Post Master and the remaining 253 village post offices.
